ⁱ The Census Bureau released version 2 of the 2020 Census Operational Plan in October 2016 and continues to refine its final testing and operational schedule. We will update this fact sheet regularly to reflect newly defined operations and the detailed schedule for census preparations and implementation. The scope and timing of many activities depends on sufficient funding from Congress from year to year. Some references to calendar years might be fiscal years for budgetary purposes. (The federal fiscal year runs from October 1 – September 30.)

ⁱⁱ OMB has proposed revisions to the official federal standards for the classification of race and ethnicity, which must go through the formal regulatory process. The Census Bureau tested a new ethnicity category for Americans of Middle Eastern and North African (MENA) origin in the 2015 National Content Test. OMB is considering a new category for persons of MENA origin, as well as guidance that would favor collecting race and ethnicity data through a combined question, instead of separate questions. It is expected to announce final revisions to the Standards by December 1, 2017, which will inform final decisions on the 2020 Census race/ethnicity question(s).
